

unILINK

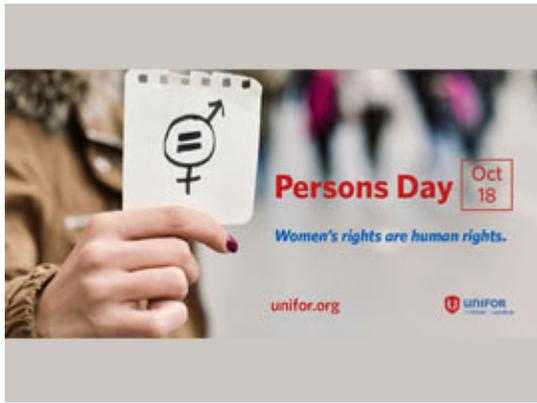

October 18, 2018

Shipyards workers march in Halifax to fight for their jobs, Saskatchewan members fight to keep our crowns, Ontario members get ready to protest health care privatization, negotiations resume with D-J Composites and activists head to Ottawa to lobby to #SaveLocalNews.

 WHAT'S HOT

 TAKE ACTION

This Persons Day, Unifor calls on federal and provincial governments to address barriers to economic justice for women.

READ MORE

Sign this petition to share your support for Halifax Shipyard workers, as they fight to keep naval work in Nova Scotia.

READ MORE

IN THE NEWS

Negotiations underway with D-J Composites for at least one round of collective bargaining before binding arbitration.

READ MORE

Unifor gets ready for massive rally with the Ontario Health Coalition and other advocates to defend public health care in Ontario.

READ MORE

Join members and activists as they rally against threats to sell off publicly owned Crown corporations in Saskatchewan.

READ MORE

Did you know that Unifor's Canadian Community Fund supports projects to improve the lives of working people and those most vulnerable?

READ MORE

Members at three B.C. paper mills welcome news that a major paper manufacturer will purchase troubled Catalyst Paper.

READ MORE

BARGAINING UPDATES

Rogers Media workers ratify new four-year collective agreement with wage increases, improved benefits and job security.

READ MORE

More than 73 transit workers may be on strike from October 27, if Pacific Western Transit fails to negotiate fairly.

READ MORE

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

Hundreds of Unifor members and supporters rallied to support the Ships Stay Here campaign – watch the livestream here.

READ MORE

RESOURCES

As activists descend on Ottawa next week to lobby MP's, Rob Cribb, investigative reporter at Toronto Star, explains why we must #SaveLocalNews

READ MORE

