TO ONTARIO MEMBERS:

Normally we would be preparing to gather for our annual Ontario Regional Council but this year has been anything but normal. While we will not be able to meet in person this December the work of the union will continue as we look hopefully ahead to a post-pandemic recovery.

There is no denying that 2020 has been a tough year with workers and their families experiencing economic upheaval on a level not seen in generations. Unifor was on the forefront of the call to increase income support for unemployed workers, to institute proper health and safety measures for workers still on the job, to call for reform of long-term care, and to develop worker-focused policies as we recover from this crisis.

In addition to the work of the union, Ontario Regional Council has always been an occasion to engage in social activism and take action to support those most in need in our communities.

In that spirit the Ontario Regional Council is contributing $80,000 to 14 food banks and women's shelters across the province, with each organization receiving more than $5,000.

The pandemic has resulted in a dramatic rise in intimate partner violence, as stay-at-home measures isolate women with their abuser while simultaneously cutting off access to outside support networks.

Among other organizations, the ORC has donated to all of the Ontario women's shelters where Unifor members provide services.

Pandemic related job loss has also resulted in a significant increase in the use of food banks, already under pressure due to underemployment, stagnant wages and the rising cost of living.

We know that Unifor members are an integral part of their communities. As such, we are pleased to help these worthy organizations provide urgently needed services to families who are living with violence or food insecurity this holiday season and beyond into 2021.
